

SOCIAL DISTANCE - PODCASTS

Description:

Infection can't spread through the airwaves, so we're headed there. Participants are encouraged to make their own podcasts. These podcasts can be whatever participants would like to talk about: Music, television, anecdote, or just you talking about absolutely nothing at all. Podcasts can be up to 30 minutes but can be shorter if desired.

How to take part:

1. Email us on KildareYouthTheatre@gmail.com expressing interest in taking part in Social Distance.
2. Create your own podcast (through the recording platform of your choice) about whatever you wish.
3. Send all recorded podcasts to us.
4. A selection of podcasts will be uploaded to our website on Saturday, 28th March.

Guidelines for participants (including ethical things to be aware of):

- Please show the finished recording to your parents before you send it. They need to approve that the content is ok for us to hear, and perhaps to upload publicly.
- Avoid graphic content, inappropriate language or content, and anything you would be embarrassed by in weeks to come.
- Check out <https://anchor.fm/> a tool that helps you make podcasts and even interview people not in the same space as you.

Timeline:

Register your interest through email by the 20th of March, alongside the name of the podcast, and what it is about/what it discusses.

Recordings should be finished and sent to us by the 24th of March.

All recordings deemed eligible will be uploaded to a platform by the conclusion of the project, 28th of March.

Who can take part?

Any registered member of KYT over the age of 11.

Prizes:

The top three podcasts will be awarded book tokens of €10 during the Quarantine Festival on Sunday, 29th March.
